

Homebase readies for RHS Flower Show with LEGO flowers

Author: Robert Hutchins - Toy News

Date: May 14th 2014

The garden retailer has immortalised some of Britain's 'least recognisable flowers' in brick form.

In the run up to the RHS Chelsea Flower show, Homebase has teamed with LEGO to recreate some of the UK's 'least recognisable flowers.'

Following a nation-wide survey, the garden retailer discovered that the British public failed to recognise their Chrysanthemums, Dahlias, Delphiniums and Sweet Williams.

To help rectify this, Homebase teamed with LEGO to immortalize these tricky flowers in brick form, thus embedding them with the public memory, forever.

Homebase hopes that the LEGO building block buds will encourage children to get gardening and educate the nation, meaning more recognition to forgotten flora, helping us work out our dahlias from our delphiniums.

Link: www.toynews-online.biz/news/read/homebase-readies-for-rhs-flower-show-with-lego-flowers/042368