

Award-winning garden designer, Adam Frost, secures another Gold medal at this year's RHS Chelsea Flower Show for the Homebase Garden

Date: 20th May

Award-winning garden designer, Adam Frost, secures another Gold medal at this year's RHS Chelsea Flower Show for the Homebase Garden – 'Time to Reflect', in association with Alzheimer's Society. This is the third Gold medal won by the UK's leading garden centre at this prestigious show.

The garden is a celebration of memories and creates the perfect environment to reflect on the important moments in time that make us who we are.

RHS Chelsea 2014 'Time to Reflect' garden:

This year's Chelsea Flower Show garden was extra special, as it was built with the assistance of the students from the first-ever Homebase Garden Academy. The award-winning garden is the culmination of all the time the Academy has spent with Adam learning about planting and landscaping, as well as working towards the RHS Level 1 Award.

Adam Frost:

Celebrating his success, Adam (left) said: “This is my sixth Gold medal at Chelsea and I’m incredibly proud of this achievement. The garden is based on personal memories but is really a celebration of all memories – reminding us how important it is to stop and reflect, as well as making time to create new ones.

Matthew Compton, Head of Garden at Homebase added: “Winning Gold is a fantastic achievement but it’s really the icing on the cake to what has been an incredible journey for the Garden Academy.” “This year has really stood out and nothing is more satisfying than helping young enthusiastic gardeners get their career in horticulture started – and this is only the beginning.”

“We hope the stories of everyone involved in making this year’s garden a great success inspire not only the next generation of gardeners through our Academy – but everyone to get outside and enjoy their garden.”
